Part 5

You are going to read an article about a girl's first job.

Choose from the sections A–D to answer the questions on the next page. The sections may be chosen more than once.

My first job

16-year-old Antonella Smith talks about her weekend job.

A

I've worked in a café near my home for about four months now. My hobby is horse-riding, which really isn't cheap. I didn't think it was fair to ask my parents to pay, so I do a few hours at the café every weekend, which allows me to cover the cost. I can't actually believe how enjoyable it's been so far. When I've visited cafés as a customer, I've often thought how dull the jobs there seemed, but I was wrong. Because I do lots of different things there, from preparing food and cooking to taking orders and serving customers, I never feel bored.

B

I've always enjoyed cooking, so it was no surprise that I'd like that part of the work, and I can now make lots of dishes that I'd never even heard of before. There's nothing I like more than chatting to people who come into the café. Quite a famous author came in for lunch with her husband last week. She writes really good novels for teenagers and I'd actually read one of her books. I asked her how she'd thought of the story for it and whether there'd be another book in the future with the same characters. Her replies were all really interesting.

C

The café's owned by a really nice couple, who are more like my friends than my bosses. It's a real pleasure to work for them. They're originally from Poland but have lived in the town for about seven years. Some of the things we prepare are actually based on Polish dishes. They're all very tasty, and customers seem to love them. In fact, they're probably the most popular items on the menu. There are 20 tables in the café altogether, so there can be over 50 customers when it's full – it can get really busy.

D

A couple of other part-time staff also have weekend jobs there, which is when the café's at its busiest. So there are usually five of us doing all the various jobs that need doing then. The café's open during the week too, and I sometimes go there with my friends after school, but as a customer of course, not to work. I work there for seven hours every Saturday, which still gives me plenty of time to do all of the other things I'm interested in. Who knows? Maybe I'll end up serving you one day!

In which section does the writer:

- 27 describe what she talked to a customer about?
- 28 say that she occasionally visits the café in her free time?
- 29 show surprise at how much she likes the work?
- 30 describe some of the food that is served at the café?
- 31 say what she's learned to do by working at the café?
- 32 explain the reason for getting her job?
- 33 say how many people work at the café?
- 34 say what she enjoys most about her job?
- 35 describes her relationship with the people she works with?
- 36 explain why her roles at the café suit her?

Part 6

You are going to read an article about a girl who enjoys writing poetry.

Read the questions on the next page.

For each question, choose the correct answer, A, B, C or D.

Writing poetry

By 15-year-old Heather Armstrong

I first got into reading poetry in my free time when I was 12 years old. It was after we studied a poem called ‘The Shout’ at school. My English teacher saw how much I liked it and gave me a special copy of the poem. It was after my mum and dad showed me a book of poetry that my maternal grandmother wrote 50 years ago that I decided I’d like to have a go at creating my own poems.

I didn’t really know how to do it, so I decided to join a weekend poetry class for teenagers at the local college. In our first class, the teacher wouldn’t let us write anything at all. We spent the whole lesson listening to him telling us how important poetry was. He was quite a well-known poet, so it wasn’t that I thought what he was saying was wrong, it just seemed like a complete waste of time.

As the course continued, I realised why he’d done it and what a great teacher he was. I was soon writing poems that I was really proud of, and he suggested trying to get them published. I sent one to a poetry website, which put it on their site a few weeks later, and another to our local newspaper, which printed it the following week. I wouldn’t feel comfortable having one of my poems in the school magazine though. I’m hoping that one will appear in a book of poetry by teenagers one day.

Although my poems are quite short, I’m not that fast at writing them. It’s sometimes hard to get ideas, and I can spend weeks thinking about them before I write anything. I find that walking in beautiful landscapes or watching wild animals gives me far more ideas than thinking about my own life, so I’ve used this to create almost all of my poems. And I try to avoid being too old-fashioned and copying poets from the past. I love my hobby!

- 37 Why did Heather decide to start writing poetry?
- A A school teacher persuaded her.
 - B She read a relative's work.
 - C She received a poem as a gift.
 - D Her parents suggested it.
- 38 What did Heather think of her poetry teacher at first?
- A He wasn't very good at writing poems.
 - B He talked too much.
 - C He didn't explain things well.
 - D He was too strict.
- 39 The first of Heather's poems to be published appeared
- A in the school magazine.
 - B on a poetry website.
 - C in a local newspaper.
 - D in a book of teenage poetry.
- 40 Heather says that most of her poetry
- A is inspired by nature.
 - B is about her own life.
 - C is written quite quickly.
 - D is quite traditional.
- 41 What would Heather write in her diary?
- A I'm so glad I've got a new poetry teacher now. The old one was absolutely terrible!
 - B I never knew my dad's side of the family wrote poetry. I'll have to ask Dad if he's written any.
 - C I've been thinking about butterflies for weeks. Finally I've started writing a poem about them.
 - D I'd already written lots of poems, so I felt I was ahead of the other students in my poetry class.

42 What is Heather doing in this text?

- A explaining why more teenagers are writing poetry these days
- B suggesting which styles of poetry young people should write
- C encouraging other teenagers to start writing poetry
- D describing her experiences of learning to write poetry.
